

Illustrations

Figure 1. The Rucker Building, built in 1925, still houses the Queen Bee Vietnamese restaurant, seen at the left. Note the high-rise development going up behind the historic structures. Photo by author.

Figure 2. Odd Fellows Hall, built in 1925, former home of the Saigon Souvenir shop. Photo by author.

Figure 3. The Rees Building, erected in 1929, which housed Saigon Market in the 1970s and now still houses a Vietnamese shop—the Vietnam Fashions clothing store. Photo by author.

Figure 4. The 1939 Underwood Building, a Streamline Moderne structure that now features one of Clarendon's still-successful Vietnamese establishments. Photo by author.

Figure 5. Café Dalat can be found in a section of one-story storefronts that once housed several Vietnamese establishments. This building used to be the Kim Long store, which offered various Vietnamese goods for sale. Photo by author.

Figure 6. Dwarfed by the former Little Tavern building (at right in the photo, now Dumond Café), Dat Hung jewelry is a tiny Vietnamese storefront that has been in operation since the late 1970s. Photo by author.

Works Cited

- America Appreciation Day Organizing Committee. America Appreciation Day report. Publishing information unknown. July 1999.
- Bailey, Steven K. "A New Guide to an Old Treasure: Ancient Town of Hoi An." Things Asian, October 1, 1996. Available from < www.thingsasian.com/goto_article/article.705.html>; accessed on November 18, 2003.
- Barringer, Herbert, Robert W. Gardner, and Michael J. Levin. Asian and Pacific Islanders in the United States. New York: Russell Sage Foundation, 1993.
- Boodman, Sandra G. "Newcomers Settle in Old Development." The Washington Post, 29 December 1977, page unknown.
- _____. "Refugees Crowd Arlington's 'Mekong Delta.'" The Washington Post, 23 September 1978, A1.
- _____. "Vietnamese Ask Board for Bilingual Learning Program in Arlington." The Washington Post, 9 March 1978, page unknown.
- Chenoweth, Karin. "Vietnamese Ring in New Year." Arlington Journal, 31 January 1979, page unknown.
- DeBaggio, Thomas. "Life After Death for Arlington?" The Arlington News, September 27, 1979.
- Dinh, Thuy. Lawyer and essayist. Interview by author, November 2, 2003, Oakton, Virginia.
- Do, Hien Duc. The Vietnamese Americans. Westport, Connecticut: Greenwood Press, 1999.
- Flinner, Susan. "Vietnamese a Burden on County Programs." The Arlington News, September 18, 1975 (Volume 28, Number 38).
- Forgey, Benjamin. "Clarendon Creeping Along Toward Convulsive Change," The Washington Post, June 27, 1998.
- Freeman, James M. Hearts of Sorrow: Vietnamese-American Lives. Stanford, California: Stanford University Press, 1989.
- Hemingway, Sandra. "Arlington's Oriental Food, Trade Shops." The Washington Star, 18 October 1979, page unknown.
- Historic Affairs and Landmark Review Board. Historic Resources in the Clarendon Commercial District. Arlington County, Virginia, May 1985.
- Kaiser, Robert G. "Some Who Fled War Find Assimilating Difficult in U.S." The Washington Post, 1 May 1977, A1.

- Khuc Minh Tho. Former staff member of Arlington County Social Services and founder of the Families of Vietnamese Political Prisoners Association. Interview by author, 10 November 2003, Falls Church, Virginia.
- Lu, Anhthu. Former resident of Arlington, Virginia. Interview by author, 19 November 2003, Arlington, Virginia.
- Meyers, Jessica. "Pho and Apple Pie: Eden Center as a Representation of Vietnamese-American Ethnic Identity in the Washington, D.C., Metropolitan Area from 1975 to the Present." Goshen College Undergraduate Symposium Annual, April 2003.
- Nguyen Ngoc Bich. Educator, author, and former director of the Vietnamese Service at Radio Free Asia. Interview by author, 21 October 2003, Springfield, Virginia.
- Phillips, Ward. "The Many Sides of Eden." New Dominion, Summer 1992, 32.
- Swanson, Susan. "Vietnamese Celebrate 'Women's Day' in Old and New Ways." The Washington Post, March 16, 1978.
- Valante, Judith, and Christopher Dickey. "Saigon's Fall Recalled in Separate Ceremonies." The Washington Post, 1 May 1978, C1.
- "Vietnamese Department Store Opens on Wilson Boulevard." The Washington Post, 22 December 1977, page unknown.
- World Heritage Center, UNESCO. "Protection of the Architectural Heritage of Viet Nam," The World Heritage Newsletter, No. 6 (December 1994). Available from < whc.unesco.org/news/6newseng.htm#story5>; accessed on November 18, 2003.